On Wednesday, April 27, Beltone held a ribbon-cutting to celebrate the opening of its new Beachwood office.

Finding a career where one can make a difference is certainly not unheard of, but for Travis Huffman, it became his passion and true calling. He began his career with Beltone after spending a number of years working in his family-owned business. He decided he needed a change, a fresh start, a new challenge and an opportunity. What he found in Beltone as an appointment setter in 2006 gave him a glimpse of just what was possible when working to help people hear better.

Armed with youthful enthusiasm for a career that he was excited about, Huffman dedicated himself to his work, excelled and became licensed to fit hearing aids in the state of Ohio. Since 2010, Huffman has worked with many patients, young and old, always focused on improving their lives.

Huffman is known among his patients for his meticulous attention to detail and his knack for being a great listener. He also goes to the next level when it comes to patient care by giving patients his cell number so that they can contact him anytime they need him.

Huffman brings his services to the people who sometimes can't make it to his office due to the weather or health. If someone needs his help, he's there and won't even think twice about it. All the equipment is portable, so going the extra mile to help those in need is a no-brainer. He has created partnerships and outreach programs with various indepen-
